Currently, mobility is one of the main concerns in urban areas. The challenge is to encourage more women to become involved in this sector, aware of the need to innovate and promote gender equality. The European Union’s framework of the Horizon 2020 programme, with the aim of raising awareness of the need to innovate and promoting gender equality, has selected as one of the 12 finalists for the EU Prize for Women Innovators: Researcher Maria Pau Ginebra, has been awarded the prize.

The Spanish government approves 800 million euros to fund corporate R&D&I initiatives. This is an important investment, given the growing demand for new solutions that contribute to the development of energy and environmental technologies. The Spanish government’s commitment to supporting innovation is a step forward in the right direction, as it will improve the competitiveness of the country and the capacity to attract investments.
